VERTICAL CITIES ASIA
SINGAPORE
Hong Kong
“Every year a one square kilometer territory will be the subject of the competition. This area, to house 100,000 people living and working, sets the stage for tremendous research and investigation into urban density, verticality, domesticity, work, food, infrastructure, nature, ecology, structure, and program - their holistic integration and the quest for visionary paradigm will be the challenges of this urban and architectural invention.”

Solids

Hong Kong exhibits neither objects nor a field, but a field of objects: densely packed, continually circulating through a network of subterranean circulation systems. Lighting is an experience of anything from an absolutely empty street to the concentrated context.
